The end.

Miss Florence Wade arrived from New York for a visit with her aunt, Mrs. M. E. Wade, and family. Mrs. Wade and her niece are spending a few days at Santa Cruz with Ben Wade and his family.

Miss Mary Rodeck was brought home from Los Angeles Wednesday and stood the trip very well considering her condition. It is thot that being at home with her family will be of great benefit to her during her convalescence.

Among the names of Americans in London who have made application as being anxious to return to this country in the near furure was that of Miss Charlotte Davis of this city. Mr. and Mrs. C. H. Whitman's names did not appear but they were probably among the number who applied.

Mr. and Mrs. Adolf Voge and children arrived from Washington, D. C., Tuesday and are visiting Mrs. Voge's mother, Mrs. Ellen R. Smith, and family. Mr. Voge has been assistant librarian of the congressional library for several years and is now head of a department in the Mechanics Library at San Francisco where he will soon go with his family.

The Farmer's Union has purchased a brand new ton-and-a-half Kelly truck for their heavy hauling. The heavy cargoes of supplies from the San Jose headquarters will be brought out here and the long delivery trips into the country around Campbell will be made with this new machine. This will greatly facilitate the handling of the company's heavy feed orders and be of great convenience to the patrons. They deserve hearty commendation for their enterprise.

W. E. Pope and family returned recently from their home state, Arkansas after a short stay. Mr. Pope sold his ranch here about the first of May and went back East with the idea that there was no place like Arkansas. After three long months in that delightful clime, he and his family, bag and baggage have returned to Campbell to live and we welcome them. They are good citizens and their return here will prove a good advertisement in their old home community. Most all who go back East to their old homes return to California to live. Their goings to return to this delightful garden spot are daily occurrences.

Solicits Reliable Data

August 6th, 1914.

The Secretary, Campbell Board of Trade, Campbell, Cal.

Dear Sir:—

I will feel greatly obliged if your organization will assist me in securing accurate data respecting the crop conditions in the district covered by its work, whether of fruit, vineyard, vegetable, hay or grain.

I would especially like to get information regarding the progress of lemon culture, the raising of chickens, turkeys, ducks and goats; bee keeping or any new industry that may have been started in your district. You might also inform me of any exceptionally good crop with the prices brought per acre, gross or net, giving names and location of the growers and accompanied, if possible, with photos of the orchard where fruit was grown. Any photos of orchard or other ranch work in progress, the drying and processing of fruit, dairy and poultry scenes will prove of great utility.

It is my purpose to keep a record of all such data for use in the county literature which will be produced by this office from time to time.

To reach the growers, I would suggest, that a copy of this letter be sent to your local newspaper for publication.

In this publicity work I look for the willing and active co-operation of every promotion organization in Santa Clara County. We have a wonderful and productive county, but we have to let the outside world know it by persistent advertising.

I will esteem it a personal favor if you will report to me any matter which you think of special interest in furthering this project. pr better still call upon me at this office and talk it over,

Yours very sincerely,
W. DRUMMOND-NORIE.

Santa Clara U to Open Soon

The University of Santa Clara has made its annual announcement that on September 2nd it will reopen for its sixty-fourth year. Its student capacity is estimated at 400 and present indications are that the attendance for 1914-15 will be the largest in the history of the University. This is the oldest educational institution on the Pacific Coast and graduates occupying the highest positions on the bench and bar of California and in other walks of life give evidence of her training.

Located in the heart of California, the University enjoys a California climate unrivaled in the world; extremes of temperature are unknown. The water supply is pure and healthful.

This institution is alive to every scientific development and welcomes every educational advance. The courses of study are fundamentally solid and include arts, sciences, law, engineering, premedical work, and high courses. Law students are free to work during the day, as the law school is conducted at night.

Considerable attention is paid to dramatics, public speaking and debating. The success of the Passion Play and the equally famous Mission Play, written entirely by alumni, and produced by the students, attest the proficiency attained.

Santa Clara is renowned in athletics and physical development; her rugby teams are formidable and prospects point to the best rugby team in her history this year. Her baseball teams have carried the name of Santa Clara among the winners on many fields. All outdoor sports are enjoyed in December as well as May.

Miss Myrtle Dunham underwent an operation yesterday morning for appendicitis, Dr. Merrill operating. Miss Dunham has been troubled for sometime with the malady but is getting along nicely.

R. J. Dunphy, a Los Angeles capitalist, has purchased the ranch, recently sold by W. J. White, but better known as the Tibbits ranch on Latimer avenue. Mr. Dunphy, it is reported, will improve the property and make his home here.

About 35 Epworth Leaguers went up to Saratoga Tuesday evening to attend the quarterly County Alliance. Basket lunch was enjoyed at 6:30. The speaker of the evening was Dr. Dan Brennett, editor of the Epworth League Herald. J. D. Crummy of San Jose was elected president of the Alliance. Mildred Beaver of Palo Alto is one of the vice-presidents.

Mr. August Jorgensen and two young daughters arrived here from Campbell, this state, first of the week and will make their home in the beautiful, modern house which is now being built for them on the hill on Rosemont Drive, from which place a magnificient view of the surrounding country and the ocean, as well as the city and bay can be enjoyed. —Encanto Express.

Ladies! The material for your new wash dress is here. The goods have just arrived. You'll find it somewhere among the following:

Gingham Twenty different patterns at 12½c.

Ripplette Fifteen different patterns at 15c.

Galatea Fifteen different patterns at 16⅔c.

You have been too busy this summer to do much sewing but the rush is almost over; you must have some new wash dresses. Come at once! If you delay some one else might, by mistake, select the very pattern that is most becoming to your style of beauty.

PLACE BELIEF IN TOAD SOUP

East Indians Have the Idea That This Nostrum Is a Cure for Insanity.

The general report on the census of India, 1911, which has just reached England, is not a mere compliation of statistics, but is as full of romance and interest as any novel dealing with native life and customs could be.

For instance, there is a most interesting note on popular beliefs regarding insanity, and Mr. O'Malley, who superintended the census taking in Bengal, Bihar and Orissa, says that the lower classes think that insanity is due to an excess of bile in the system, or to worms in the head. "Neglect of the worship of the gods, or the curse of a Yogi, Sadha, or other holy man may produce it," he says. "It is especially liable to attack those who practise Tantric arts, but fail to control the spirits which they evoke. Generally, however, it is attributed to demoniacal possession.

"The spirit which is most commonly thought to produce madness is Brahmadaitya, the spirit of a Brahman who has died an unnatural death. Madness being due to possession by an evil spirit, every attempt is made to appease or exorcise it. The exorcists hold smoking chillies to the nostrils of the patient and chant mantras, addressing the spirit in filthy and obscene language, all with the idea of driving it away. When these means prove futile they prescribe a diet calculated to force the spirit to leave his victims in fear of losing his caste, for Brahmadaitya is the spirit of a high caste Brahman. The unfortunate patient has, therefore, to consume soup made of toads, etc. When these abominable nostrums fail the use of medicated oils and of indigenous herbs and drugs is resorted to.

"The medical treatment of the insane prescribed by the Kavirajes sometimes takes the following forms: The mud taken from putrid tanks is plastered on the patient's head, or aloe pulp is mixed with water and applied in the form of an emulsion. A favorite remedy is soup made from a particular kind of frog."

GUARD FOR POISON BOTTLES

Gummed Band Carrying Wire Loop Gives Warning That Phial Contains Dangerous Substances.

A very simple device for conveying a warning that a bottle contains poisonous substances has been patented. It consists of a gummed band carrying a wire loop, the ends of which, terminating in spring coils, are firmly fastened in the texture of the band, says Popular Mechanics. The wire loop is normally held over the top of the cork but may be pulled back with the forefinger when the cork is to be removed, and springs back to upright position. It is obvious that the cork cannot be removed without indicating the nature of the contents of the bottle. The device is applied by simply moistening the gummed side of the band and sticking it around the neck of the bottle.

MAKES VARNISH DRY QUICKLY

Product From Wood Oil Tree of China Said to Have Had Revolutionary Effect on Industry.

Five million gallons of wood oil (also known as tung oil), made from the seeds of the wood oil tree, was imported from China last year, and the product is said to have had a revolutionary effect on the varnish industry of the United States. It has largely taken the place of kauri gum and has made possible the manufacture of a quicker drying varnish, which is less liable to crack than that made from kauri gum, and has been found of special value in waterproof priming for cement. The tree is climatically adapted for cultivation in the southern states, and the department of agriculture is distributing one-year-old specimens to bona fide experimenters.

Spoons in China.

The Chinese do not use knives and forks as we in this country do, but they have some use for spoons. Consul-General Anderson writes from Hong-Kong that there seems to be no reason why some energetic American spoon manufacturer cannot develop a market in China. Before the Standard invaded China with its 7-cent lamps the Chinese had little artificial light. Now it is only a very humble coolie that is without illumination by night. So with the spoon. John Chinaman knows what spoons are, having made them himself. Long, peculiar looking instruments they are, but spoons for all that, and serving spoon purposes just as well as our dainty designs. Spoons of German and Australian manufacture, made in imitation of native goods, are sold in increasing quantities in the Chinese department stores of Hong-kong.

IS SELF-MADE STAR

Ford Sterling Has Achieved Own Way in Profession.

One of the Most Prominent of Moving Picture Players, He Began His Career as a Boy Clown With a Popular Circus.

Ford Sterling, who, next to John Bunny, is said to be the highest salaried comedian in the motion picture world, is a Wisconsin boy and proud of it. He was born November 3, 1880, in La Crosse, and the story of his rise to his present position reads like a romance.

When he was seventeen years of age, Ford Sterling ran away from his La Crosse home and joined the Robinson circus, in which he was known as "Keno, the Boy Clown." After two seasons under the white tops, he made his first stage appearance with George Whittier in a piece called "Tangled Relatives."

After that the comedian appeared with the Four Mortons, John and Emma Ray, Otis Skinner and William Gillette in various vehicles, climbing steadily upward as one may see by the names of the stars with whom he was associated.

Mr. Sterling made his first appearance as a film actor in 1912, and later in the same year he helped to found the famous Keystone Comedy company, until he organized his own concern.

One of the first productions of the new corporation is called "When Smaltz Loves," in which Mr. Sterling plays the principal part, of course.

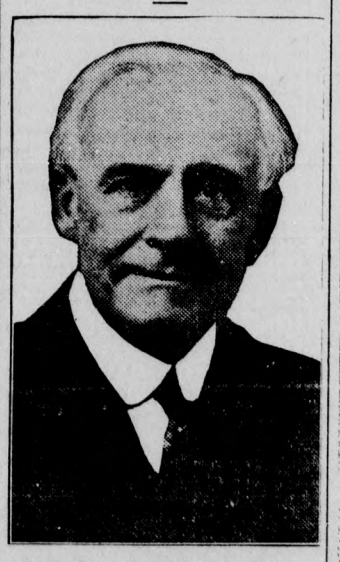
Ford Sterling's work is of the slapstick variety and he is regarded as the peer of burlesque funmakers. Film comedies contain many trying situations—the comedian may push a river out of his way or leap from the top of a skyscraper—but the point is you laugh when you see them, and Ford Sterling's ability to produce laughs has made him a fortune and one of the most popular stars of the motion picture world.

WRECKED TRAIN FOR MOVIES

Engine and Four Cars Thrown Over an Embankment While Waiting Camera Clicked.

An engine drawing four coaches at 50 miles an hour crashed into an open switch at Milltown, N. J., and rolled down a 35-foot embankment while six movie operators stood by and turned the cranks of their cameras. No one was hurt, as there was no one on the train but the engineer, Thomas Maguire, who jumped while the engine was in motion. The cars burst into flame when they had tumbled to the bottom of the embankment, the engine blew up and the stunt was such a success generally that the company considered the expenditure of $15,000 a good investment.

THOMAS COMMERFORD



Thomas Commerford, so well-known in motion pictures for his ability to handle the different characters assigned to him, prior to his engagement with another film manufacturing company, played in Lincoln J. Carter productions for over a quarter of a century. Mr. Commerford plays "heavy" parts.

Maid Personally Interested.

Rosalie, Arele Lane's colored maid is quite a character, and just recently gave her adored mistress away in great style. In talking to a visitor she said: "Yassum, Miss Lane do have a powerful lot of dresses, but she has some she has never worn; she jes likes buyin' 'em, I guess. I wish she would wear 'em—when they is well wore I get 'em, yassum.' As a matter of fact, Miss Lane is one of the most stylishly dressed women in the western photoplay world, both on and off the stage.

New Star in Photoplays.

Edna Maison has started her star ring career with a comedy drama, "The Transformation of Prudence." Miss Maison takes the part of a Quaker girl who enters society and effects a cure for her erratic husband. The production is being directed by George Stanley. Ray Galagher is playing opposite Miss Maison.

MEN WHO MADE GREAT PLAY

Harold McGrath, author of "The Million-Dollar Mystery," and Lloyd Lonergan, the author of the scenario.

REGISTER A MARK FOR TACT

Device of Manager Resulted in Retaining Services of Valued Man, and Curing Defect.

Carlyle Blackwell once employed a "heavy" whom he afterwards discovered to be pigeon-toed. Mr. Blackwell was in despair, for the man was a splendid actor and he hated to part with him. More, he felt he could not wound the man's feelings by remark on this defect. Finally he hit on a brilliant plan. Whenever he was near the actor he himself walked pigeon-toed. At last the man noticed, and, being not particularly tactful himself, remarked to Blackwell:

"Say, I never knew your toes turned in!" Said Blackwell: "They don't turn in any more than yours do—and, by the way, on the screen they don't register half as much as yours do."

"Why," the "heavy" said in surprise, "I'm not pigeon-toed!"

"What'll you bet?" asked Blackwell. They bet something, and then the "heavy" was taken to see himself on the screen. Blackwell won—both ways, for he convinced the man he was pigeon-toed without having hurt his feelings and managed to retain his services, for the "heavy" never again forgot his feet for a moment and there was not another picture in which he was registered as being pigeon-toed.

"Bally-Hooing" Into Riches.

Mr. Tom Moore of Washington, D. C., started in the early days of motion pictures by purchasing the film of "The Great Train Robbery" for $21—about all he had. He presently traded the film for a horse and buggy and a cow, sold the animals, and found himself with a capital of $85, on which he leased a theater; he bally-hooed in front, his wife sold tickets, and when the show started he ran the machine—singing songs to Mrs. Moore's piano accompaniment between reels. This pooh-bah gentleman has a circuit of 15 theaters, which he is replacing with much more ambitious ones, the first of the new type costing $225,000.—World's Work.

Pictures to Instruct Ball Players.

John J. McGraw, manager of the Giants, has made arrangements to install a projection machine in the Giants' club house, where the ball players will be given daily instruction and tips regarding possible improvements in their work. Harry E. Aiken, president of a film corporation, conceived the idea of applying the lessons of the movies to big league baseball. He believes that just as the employes of the Pittsburgh steel plants are taught industrial processes and labor saving movements in their work, so can a baseball player be coached by scenes of the motion picture camera in improving his work.

Plan to Produce New Works.

Lois Weber, Phillips Smalley, and their company of players will leave the studios at Hollywood, Cal., shortly for Laguna beach, along the southern coast of California, where they will remain two weeks and produce two dramas. Among those who will support Miss Weber and Mr. Smalley in the Laguna beach productions are Rupert Julian, Fred Wood, William Brown and Ella Hall.

The Way of It.

"There was a big cut in iron lately."

"Why, I didn't notice any dropping of prices."

"Prices didn't drop."

"What did, then?"

"Some convicts who sawed through the prison bars."

At the Club.

"We have more important matters to discuss just at present. That osculation matter can wait."

"But, my dear madam, osculation is the most pressing of issues."

Alluring.

Madge—Would you marry a spendthrift, my dear?

Marjorie—It wouldn't be so bad if he were just starting out on his career.—Judge.

Expensive Production Destroyed.

The negative of "Protea," the $60,000 production, was burned in the Eclair fire, which destroyed their plant.

LATE A. B. CROWE

Wherein "Dead One" Is Galvanized Into Semblance of Life by Reversed Current.

By GEORGE EDWARD STREETER.

He walked into the office of the information bureau with the air of a man having something on his mind which he desired to dispose of quickly.

"Is the manager in?" he asked shortly and in a tone which made the girl at the counter open her eyes in surprise.

"No, sir; but will you see the assistant?"

"Well, I dunno! I want to see the boss, but p'raps the other one'll do," replied the caller.

"Yes, sir," said the mild-mannered Robert Picket, the company's chief clerk, as he approached the counter.

"Are you the man who said A. B. Crowe was dead?" demanded the stranger.

"No, sir; not yet," replied the clerk with a half-smile on his face.

"This is no laughing matter—not by a jugful," rejoined the caller, his eyes fairly ablaze.

"I don't understand you," interrupted the young man. "Please explain."

"Well, if you didn't, who did say Crowe was dead?"

"I'm sure I don't know; I'll give it up."

"Not on your life; no, sirree, you don't give it up, and I ain't goin' to give it up, either. You show me the reporter who said Crowe was a dead one," shouted the visitor.

"I want to see him," he added significantly.

"And who are you, sir? What is your name?" asked Picket in his usual soft, even tone, which seemed only to add fuel to the other's wrath.

"My name?" he exclaimed. "Why, my name is Crowe—Arthur Benjamin Crowe. That's what my name is. I am Crowe, and I ain't dead, d'ye see?"

"Too bad," rejoined the clerk; and then, before the stranger could speak again, he added: "That's all right, Mr. Crowe—you're not dead."

"Of course I'm not; that's what brings me here. Dead! No, indeed! If I was dead, I wouldn't have come—would I?"

"Hardly," agreed Picket, who began to doubt the sanity of his visitor. "Don't you worry, Mr. Crowe; I'll vouch for you not being dead, if necessary. Is that all?"

"No, that's not all. You people said I was dead, and I want an apology published in every paper in this city, or there's goin' to be pecks of trouble."

"Don't you believe it. You're mistaken. Trouble comes to most people after they are dead.

"To put such an item in the papers would be stupid. That would be poor advertising. What is your line of business?"

"I'm a baker, and have been doin' business right here in this city for over ten years; and now, after all this time for your reporter to send out information that I was dead—

"Why, it's awful. It's hurt me a whole lot, and I demand an apology—so I do."

Baker Crowe took off his hat, mopping his brow; for he had grown very red in the face, and very hot all over.

At that moment the manager entered the office, and Picket signaled to him, introducing Crowe:

"Mr. Thomas, this is A. B. Crowe, who claims we reported he was dead, and he has called to deny it."

"Of course, I deny it," chimed in Crowe; "and you fellers will have to apologize in every paper of this city."

"Won't you step into my private office, Mr. Crowe? Let us talk this thing over."

The two men entered the manager's room.

All the reports ever written regarding Crowe were called for; and, upon being examined, it was found that nothing had ever been issued to the effect that he had gone to his reward. But the irate baker was not satisfied.

"You phone Jones & Small, where I buy my flour, and ask them," urged Crowe.

"Ask them what?"

"Why, ask them if one of your fool reporters didn't tell them that I was dead."

"What's the use, my friend? I am willing to take your word for it that you are alive. Now let it go at that. You must excuse me, for I'm very busy this morning."

"Not on yer life, by chiminy!" shouted the now thoroughly angry man. "No, sirree! You phone Jones & Small, or there'll be trouble for you and the whole bloomin' outfit!"

To appease him, Mr. Thomas did call up the grocery firm, whose bookkeeper stated that he had been asked by one of the bureau's reporters if he knew that Crowe was dead.

"And then what?" asked the manager.

"Well, I hadn't heard of his death; so I sent a clerk out to his shop, and while he was gone Crowe walked into the warehouse. I told him I heard he was dead.

"And that made him mad, I suppose."

"And then you told him to come up here, did you?" queried the manager.

"Well," he continued, "how much does Crowe owe you now?"

"About eight hundred."

"How much of it overdue?"

"Probably five hundred."

"Why don't you make him pay it?"

"Easier said than done, Mr. Thomas. He's awfully slow."

"Suppose I collect it for you?"

"Wish you would, sir; we'd like to close the account."

Coming out of the telephone booth, Mr. Thomas continued to talk with the baker.

"Now, look here, Crowe. I am convinced you are not dead. We never said you were dead, and we don't want you to die. Jones & Small misunderstood our reporter."

"That's no good," broke in Crowe. "You must apologize in the papers, or I'll sue you, and there'll be a whole lot of trouble."

He rose from the chair in his excitement.

"I don't think so," replied the manager, as he touched a concealed button on his desk, which immediately brought the chief clerk to the door.

"Picket, we've had complaints about Crowe being slow in meeting his obligations, haven't me?"

"Yes, sir, I've just looked through the Red Book, and find—"

"Don't go, Mr. Crowe," said the manager, as his visitor edged toward the door. "Of course, you would hardly expect us to know all these little things, but, my dear man, our work has many sides to it. What did you find, Picket?"

"So far as we know he owes to local houses nearly thirteen hundred dollars, and there is seven hundred and eighty dollars of that which is overdue," answered the clerk.

"Is that right, Crowe?" queried Mr. Thomas.

"Blast you people, anyway," replied the baker. "You fellows know too much."

"Careful, friend. Don't talk like that, or maybe there will be other items in the newspapers besides retractions of false deaths. What are you going to do about settling this indebtedness?"

"Nothing! You bet your neck—nothing! I'll do nothing!"

"Tut, tut! man! That's no way to talk. Let me give you a little advice. Go and pay Jones & Small this afternoon. You owe them about five hundred dollars.

"I have told them that you would settle the past due amount. If you fail to do so tomorrow morning's papers will include among the court news an item affecting a certain Mr. Crowe, a baker. Now, don't disappoint me. Remember!"

The two men stood looking each other straight in the eye for a moment.

"Good day, Crowe. Go and show your creditors that you are not a dead one. Pay up, and be a man."

The manager offered his hand, which the other hesitatingly took.

The interview was over.

The baker, whose entrance had been somewhat lion-like, left the office as a lamb, and a dumb one at that.

TIME OF LITTLE MOMENT

Disregard of Promptness in China Is Seen by Dr. Wu as a National Fault.

"If you make an appointment with an American you will find him in his office at the appointed time," writes Dr. Wu Tingfang in "America Through the Spectacles of an Oriental Diplomat." "Everything to be done by him during the course of the day has its fixed hour, and hence he is able to do a greater amount of work than many others. Chinese, unfortunately, have no adequate ideas of the value of time. This is due, perhaps, to our mode of reckoning. In the West a day is divided into 24 hours, and each hour into 60 minutes, but in China it has been the custom for centuries to divide day and night into 12 (shih) 'periods,' each period consisting of two hours, so that an appointment is not made for a particular minute, as in America, but for one or other of these two-hour periods. This has created ingrained habits of unpunctuality which the advent of clocks and watches and contact with foreigners is slow to remove.

"The time-keeping railway is, however, working a revolution, especially in places where there is only one train a day, and a man who misses that has to wait for the morrow before he can resume his journey. Some years ago a luncheon—'tiffin' we call it in China—was given at a restaurant in Peking by a couple of friends in my honor; the hour was fixed at noon sharp. I arrived in time and found that not only were none of the guests there, but that even the hosts had not arrived. As I had several engagements I could not wait, so I ordered a few dishes and ate what I required. Still none of the hosts had made their appearance, so I left with a request to the waiter that he would convey my thanks.

"Knowing the unpunctuality of our people the conveners of a public meeting will often tell the Chinese it will begin an hour or two before the set time, whereas foreigners are notified of the exact hour. Not being aware of this device I once attended a public meeting at the appointed time only to find that I had to wait for over an hour. I protested that I should in future be treated as a foreigner in this regard."

CHILDREN MAY SEE PARADE

Announcement of School Principal Brings Some Characteristic Notes From Fond Parents.

"Children who bring written requests from their parents may be excused to see the circus parade," the school principal announced. Here are some of the notes that were handed to the teachers:

"Please live Pearl to go to the parade 10 Oglock out of school."

"The Teacher of Morris' Class. Kindly allow my child to go home timely from school so he should be able to see the circus parade."

"My dear Miss—Kindly excuse Bessie at 10 o'clock so as to enable her to see the parade (circus) as I know she will greatly benefit by it and oblige her mother."

"Dear Teacher! Please let Louis Gou to The Parade of the Sircus."

MENDING HOLES IN UTENSILS

Permanent Repair May Be Made by Use of a Shot or Piece of Lead—Hammer Will Flatten It.

It is easy to repair holes in pots and pans without the aid of a tinsmith. Make the hole round by inserting the point of a knife and twisting it. Place the pot or pan upon any firm, flat piece of metal, such as an anvil, a bar of iron or an inverted flatiron, so that the hole is immediately over and touching the iron. In the middle of the hole place a shot about the size of the hole. Any piece of lead will serve if shot is not handy. A few sharp blows with a hammer will flatten the lead and spread it out, filling the hole tightly and overlapping enough to hold it in place. A few strokes with a file and a rub with sandpaper completes the operation. The repair is permanent.

BEGGARS THRIVE IN THE HAGUE

PEACE PALACE, THE HAGUE

NO OTHER town in Holland is so infested by beggars as is The Hague. Every year sees the advent of more and more of that clan of undesirables. The reason is not far to seek, for The Hague possesses 130 charitable institutions, so that a beggar with a little management can live all the year round on other people's money. At The Hague you can be born, fed, clothed, educated, housed, married and buried at no cost to yourself or your family. You can secure medical attendance, medicine, vacation trips into the country and a residence in a convalescent home all for nothing, writes a correspondent of the Chicago Daily News.

Besides the charitable institutions there are many people of wealth and leisure in The Hague, who would rather give a small coin to a beggar than have the bother of refusing him and have him follow along part of the way. Shopkeepers dare not refuse a "hand-out" to the vagrants lest they obstruct their store entrances or bother their customers.

Difficult to Convict.

But, is there, then, no law against vagrancy in Holland? Certainly there is, but the trouble lies in the difficulty of convicting a man of the offense of mendicancy. For all professional beggars carry with them some wares for sale, as their ostensible business is that of "itinerant salesmen." These they show to any policeman who may attempt to convict them of begging. But they would be terribly disappointed if anyone really bought their goods.

Beggars may be divided roughly into three groups: First, the maimed, who cannot work; second, the healthy men who are too lazy or have too little energy to work, and, third, the professionals. The maimed beggars could easily find "homes" dedicated to their various ailments, but they could not live such free and easy lives as they do now, for, on an average, they "earn" about twenty florins (eight dollars) a week, which is more than many a hard-working laborer can make. Singularly enough, it is just among the poorer laborers that these beggars meet the most pity and find their stanchest supporters.

The healthy but lazy beggars are in reality the product of the large towns. They are recruited from the persons who have not been taught a regular trade. Among the poorer people when the boys leave school at the age of fourteen years, the parents cannot resist the temptation to let them go out as errand or office boys, by which they earn about one and one-half florins (60 cents) a week, which is quite an addition to the family income. Most errand boys learn nothing but to loaf about the streets, and when they become too old to be employed as boy they join the "unemployed." For where it is difficult for skilled laborers to obtain regular employment it is much harder for those who have learned neither trade nor handicraft. Now they have no other alternative but to beg or steal. Generally, they do both, and it is from this contingent that the criminal class is reinforced.

It is evident that this group could, with some care, be eliminated from the vagrant beggar ranks. The Dutch government has come to recognize this fact and has appointed a commission to assist parents in the choice of a trade or handicraft for their children, and a movement is on foot to induce the government to extend free technical education to those leaving the elementary schools. It might be necessary to make such tuition obligatory. This would also keep the children off the streets at the most dangerous age.

It has been found impossible to reclaim the professional beggar, as the Dutch government has been reluctantly forced to confess after experimenting for 25 years with giving them work in the government agricultural colony—Veenhuizen. Only those convicted of vagrancy or beggary, or those sentenced to short terms of imprisonment for theft, can be housed at Veenhuizen after completing their term of imprisonment. Instead, however, of putting their knowledge of agriculture and other branches taught them into practise, the men dismissed from the colony generally drift back to crime and prison and often pass their lives alternately in prison and in Veenhuizen.

They Are Degenerates.

On careful examination by alienists and medical men these professional beggars were all found to have some form of psychical degeneration, as well as some physical taint, which must have made them the shiftless vagrants they eventually became. Almost without exception, beggars of the third group come from the very poorest people, who are ill housed, ill fed and ill clothed. The task for the government with this class is even more difficult than with the others, for here it is not only education that is needed, but practically everything—better housing, food and clothing for the whole nethermost layer of society.

It will be almost impossible to reform the present generation of beggars, but it certainly will be possible to prevent the rising generation of impoverished Netherlanders from swelling the ranks of the idle poor.

A new method of dealing with begging is now to be tried. Begging itself is not to be constituted an offense; but, first, its causes will be investigated, and for this purpose several societies and institutions are to work together with the government. When the causes have been ascertained an effort will be made to help the individual to overcome his difficulty and so prevent him from becoming a permanent burden upon society.

FOUND, MOST STUPID WOMAN

Manuel, Cigar Man at Shanley's, Says She Is His Wife, but Lady Has Yet to Be Heard From.

Alfred Henry Lewis, the writer, has long been one of the habitues of Shanley's restaurant. He knows the proprietors as brothers, calls the cabaret performers by their first names, has the attentive eye of every waiter in sight, and gets solicitous messages of inquiry from the chef about his impressions of new dishes.

Mr. Lewis is an observant and philosophic friend. Furthermore, beneath a solemn manner he observes the humor of life. For instance, the other night, he called Manuel, the cigar man in the restaurant, to his table. "Manuel," said he, unsmilingly, "I want you to tell my friends about that remarkable occurrence which concerned your wife and your two pairs of shoes."

"Ah, Mist' Lewees," exclaimed Manuel in the acquired English of the Catalonian, "that is something domesteeck, but if it should interest your friends, then—"

Manuel shrugged his shoulders and continued. "You see, gent'men, with my costume I have two pairs of shoes—one he ees white and one he ees black. My wife, gent'men, ees most stupid woman ever yet leef. This thing I tell Mr. Lewees and he say also my wife most stupid woman ever yet leef. When I tell you, gent'men, you say my wife most stupid woman ever yet leef. One day I sleep late and I say to my wife she must breeng my clothes queeck, so I can hurry to my work. She breeng me my clothes and she breeng me one white shoe an' one black shoe. 'Here, woman,' say I, 'How you think I can wear one white shoe an' one black shoe?' Madre de Dios, get me queeck my right shoes?' That woman she so stupid she come back and say, 'What can I do? The other pair just the same.'"—New York Letter to the Cincinnati Times-Star.

MUD LUMPS IN RIVER

PECULIAR FORMATIONS THAT ARE HARD TO EXPLAIN.

Presence of "Islands," Forming Serious Obstruction to Navigation, Has Never Been Accounted for on Scientific Basis.

The territory within a mile or two of each of the mouths of the Mississippi is characterized by large swellings or upheavals of tough, bluish gray clay, to which has been applied the name "mud lumps."

Many of these lumps, says the Memphis Commercial Appeal, rise just off shore and form islands having a height or five or ten feet, but some do not reach the water surface.

To an observer at the mouth of the river the idea that the region is a great dumping ground for a large part of the United States is most impressive. The land is being built out into the sea at an estimated average rate of about three hundred feet a year. In one place in Garden Island bay the land appears to have advanced 2,000 feet in the spring of 1912.

The mud lumps are commonly twenty to thirty feet broad and stand twenty to thirty feet above the adjacent bottom. Generally a mud lump rises in a few weeks or months to a height of four or five feet above the surface of the water. Then it remains quiet and is beaten down by the waves in the course of a few years. Many of them subside, however, and some disappear over night.

Among the most conspicuous and impressive features of the mud lumps are the mud springs that are active on many, if not all of them. The discharge from these springs consists of salt, watery mud and gas—in fact, gas escapes at many places on the surface of the delta of the Mississippi. Gas rises in bubbles in all the mud springs.

It is considered by some scientists that the mud lumps are produced by a gentle seaward flow of layers of semi-fluid clay under the land and the shallow water under the ends of the passes. The mud lumps appear to be the product of flow, because in no other places have such thick bodies of clay been found, and the fact that they occur almost exclusively near the ends of the passes and that they are most active during and after times of high water seems to support this theory.

Plowing With Dogs.

One of our correspondents while waiting for a steamer at Eagle on the Yukon was attracted by loud howlings in several different keys, accompanied by a string of fluent oaths and curses, writes the editor of the Engineering and Mining Journal. On investigating the source of the uproar he discovered an indignant prospect farmer attempting to plow a small field with a team of five big, shaggy "huskies." It was July 5, and the temperature was 85 degrees in the shade. The poor dogs, with swollen tongues hanging from their mouths, were struggling gamely in the hot sun, but were moving the plow only by small, irregular jerks. Every few minutes they would throw themselves exhausted on the ground, and then their excited master would assail them with whip, boots and verbal pyrotechnics simultaneously. Altogether, it was picturesque, but ineffective plowing. Unluckily, there was no local S. P. C. A.

The Insulting Grocer.

The admission of bribery on the part of the New Haven lines led Jerome S. McWade, the Duluth capitalist, to say at an advertising men's banquet:

"Confessions of this sort do harm. They make the public think that all capital is corrupt. Yet one corrupt capitalist doesn't prove the corruption of all capital, does it?

"Yet, apropos of this wretched Mellen business, a Socialist grocer insulted me this morning.

"The man told me gloomily, apropos of some overdue interest, that he'd have to close down—he couldn't make groceries pay any longer.

"'Well,' said I, 'try some other business. There are thousands of ways of making money.'

"'Yes, but there's only one honest way, Mr. McWade.'

"'What way is that?' said I.

"He gave a loud, harsh laugh.

"'I thought you wouldn't know it,' he said."

Dividing Two Birds Among Twelve.

Problem:

One canary bird plus one parrot, divided by twelve, equals X.

Solve for X.

Such is the problem which confronts Judge Rothgerber in his attempts to distribute equitably the estate of Mrs. Christina Leonard. One canary bird and one parrot equals a portion of the estate to be divided among the heirs. Twelve equals the number of heirs, and X equals what each will get out of that portion.

Mrs. Linnie Herold and Mrs. R. Curry were called to the bedside of the testator as witnesses to her will. In gratitude for their services, Mrs. Leonard bequeathed to each a bird. The law forbids witnesses to benefit under a will. Therefore the feathered legacies must be divided among the other heirs.—Denver News.

LOCKED CORK FOR BOTTLES

Key Takes Place of Corkscrew With This New Stopper—Safety Afforded to Poison Phials.

An ingenious method of corking bottles has been invented which is applicable to the bottling of more expensive liquors, Chambers' Journal states. This latest device comprises the familiar cork made to standard sizes so as to fit bottles of varying capacity and shapes and provided with a patent metallic double cap. The cork is driven into the bottle in the usual manner; but, instead of a corkscrew, a small key is used for its withdrawal. In the metallic cap is a small slot for insertion of the key, which is slightly depressed. This causes the upper part of the cap to fly upward by means of a spring. This movable disk, which slides upon a substantial though slender shaft, serves as a grip for the fingers, so that a steady and direct pull draws the cork without damaging it. Consequently, when some of the contents of the bottle has been poured out, the cork may be replaced and driven home, the bottle being thus sealed as tightly as it was originally. To all intents and purposes it is the application of the Yale lock used for doors, etc. The cork cannot be drawn without the key, so that tampering with the contents or improper use is impossible, because the key is in the possession of the owner or some responsible person. The drawing of a cork thus becomes an easy operation, and destruction of the cork is prevented. Although the stopper has been designed specially for the liquor, wine and spirit trade, it at the same time completely solves the vexed question of securing the safety of bottles containing poisonous liquids, as a bottle stoppered with this new appliance cannot be opened without the key; and as this is in safe keeping, premeditation is required to obtain the contents.

Plans Daring Voyage.

An Irvine man is about to make an attempt to establish a record in the way of a voyage to St. John's, Newfoundland, in a sixteen-foot open sailing boat, reports the London Mail.

The adventurer is Mr. James Green, who is at present employed in Messrs. Mackie and Thomson's shipbuilding yard. Mr. Green has long entertained the idea of making this attempt, and has given the matter careful consideration. He has made arrangements for all his supplies being stored in airtight tanks, and with this exception he does not intend making any alterations on his boat.

He will coast right down to Liverpool, thence over to Queenstown, and after completing his stock of provisions there, his route will be straight across the Atlantic to St. John's.

Mr. Green will undertake the journey unaccompanied, and will take a few books with him to read when the conditions are favorable, and he anticipates doing the double journey in about five months.

Arnold Bennett's Yacht.

Possibly for some folk my sloop Velsa's chief attribute would be that, once seen, she cannot be forgotten. She is a lovely object, and not less unusual than lovely. She is smart, also, but nothing more dissimilar to the average smart, conventional English or American yacht can well be conceived. She is a magnet for the curious. When she goes under a railway bridge while a train is going over it the engine driver, of no matter what nationality, will invariably risk the lives of all of his passengers in order to stare at her until she is out of sight. This I have noticed again and again. The finest compliment her appearance ever received was paid by a schoolboy, who, after staring at her for a quarter of an hour as she lay at a wharf at Kingston-on-Thames, sidled timidly up to me as I leaned in my best maritime style over the quarter and asked: "Please, sir, is this a training brig?" Romance gleamed in that boy's eye.—The Century.

The New Philippines.

While it was not until the year 1898 that the name "Philippines" became a familiar one to Americans, it is a fact that, not a hundred years before, the name of the "New Philippines" was applied to a large area of American soil.

The first settlement in what now constitutes the state of Texas was made in the year 1685 by French immigrants. During the 25 years following there was a constant struggle between the French and the Spanish for possession and supremacy, a struggle that finally resulted in favor of the latter. So, in 1814, the name of the "New Philippines" was given to the country. This was its official name in the Spanish records for many years, and until the name of Texas, from a tribe of Indians, gradually came into use.

Easy to Misjudge Remedy You Need

In Overcoming Blood Trouble Do Not Be Fooled By Mere Claims.

Study the Game and You Will Understand Why Some Things Are Deceptive.

In treating any blood disorder the fundamental fact must be observed that the aim and object of the medicine used is to permit a hit, a home run and a sure, safe hit every time.

Now the propulsive effect of S. S. S. is to regulate the blood formation, to assist in development of tissue and to have a decided bearing upon the lymphatic influence, all of which is in the promotion of blood health. And this propulsive effect will be similar to the straight ball pitched to insure a safe hit and not the deceptive gyrations designed to fool the batter. S. S. S. is a plain, straight blood purifier. It is not a fanciful mixture to move the bowels and thus falsely play upon susceptible minds. It is not a nerve excitant to exhilarate for the moment and then die away. It contains none of those mineral drugs which dry up the tissues. In other words, it does not play to the bleachers nor to the "fans." It is just a wholesome, powerful, searching blood remedy, one ingredient of which serves the active purpose of arousing each cellular part of the tissues to select from the blood the nutriment or materials required for renewal of health.

S. S. S. is prepared from nature's own materials, not an ounce of drugs being used. And yet it is more potent, more powerful, more searching and more productive of restorative results than from the most active of all the minerals employed in medicine.

Its action by elimination of the irritating poisons that infect the blood, is one of the very important things to know.

You can get S. S. S. at any drug store, but take no other so-called blood purifier falsely claimed "just as good."

S. S. S. is prepared by The Swift Specific Co., 999 Swift Bldg., Atlanta, Ga., and if you have any deep-seated or obstinate blood trouble, write to their Medical Department for free advice. It will be worth your while to do so.

To the Electors of the Fourth Supervisorial District of Santa Clara County:

Ladies, Gentlemen and Fellow Citizens:—

I hereby announce myself as a candidate for the office of Supervisor of the Fourth District, of Santa Clara County.

If honesty of purpose and efficient service meet with your approbation I solicit your suffrage.

I propose to serve the whole people without prejudice to any individual or faction.

I will appoint efficient Road Masters, loyal to the tax payers, who will deliver constant service. I will permit no Road Master to hire one or more of his teams at road work to the exclusion of any other tax payer.

I am in favor of a method of treatment and control of the inmates of County Institutions that would make such institutions self-supporting.

I believe that the flood waters of the Almaden and the Guadalupe creeks should be, as far as practical, diverted into retaining reservoirs near the foothills for the percolation of flood waters into the subterranean channels, thus raising the water in our underground reservoirs.

I pledge myself to carry out the above purposes to the best of my ability and will not ignore my constituency in the expenditure of their funds.

THE GRANGE

THE GRANGE IDEA.

Out of It Grew the French Syndicates, Says a Grange Historian.

Mortimer Whitehead, now of California, but formerly of New Jersey, tells how the grange "idea" came to take root in France. He remarks that during the grange encampment at the Philadelphia Centennial exposition in 1876 the then national master (John T. Jones of Arkansas) placed in his hands the work of translating the ritual of the order into French for the benefit of a Frenchman he had appointed as deputy to carry the grange "idea" into France. This French gentleman was a government official sent from France specially to study our agriculture as shown at the exposition. "I performed the duty assigned me, and for a long time after his return to France," says Mr. Whitehead, "I kept up a grange correspondence with M. Lamousin. I kept some of those letters as mementos, and the words, 'Mon cher monsieur et frere,' have the same fraternity in them as if written, 'My dear sir and brother.'

"The grange 'idea' thus planted in France took root and has grandly prospered. The societies were called 'syndicates' and still exist all over the country with tens of thousands of members today. Then the 'idea' that had been 'proclaimed to the world' spread into Germany, Italy, England, Ireland, Canada and other lands. Under date of Calcutta, India, Jan. 23, this year, I have the annual statement showing the progress of the grange 'idea' in India for last year. There are now 12,323 local societies, of which 11,382 are agricultural. The agricultural members number 467,378, capital over $6,500,000. And so it goes."

JUVENILE GRANGES.

Official Instructions on Organizing the Young People.

Under the motto, "Prepare in happy childhood for intelligent manhood and womanhood," a booklet has been prepared by National Secretary C. M. Freeman by direction of the national grange, giving instruction on the organization of juvenile granges. The following suggestions are made:

Juvenile granges may be organized within the jurisdiction of a state grange, under such rules and regulations as the state grange may provide, and not in conflict with the constitution of the Order of the Patrons of Husbandry. Each juvenile grange shall be within the jurisdiction and under the special charge of a subordinate grange. Children of all persons eligible to membership in a subordinate grange, over eight and under fourteen years of age, are eligible to membership in a juvenile grange. The membership fee shall be 15 cents and the quarterly dues 5 cents for each member, unless otherwise fixed by the state grange.

In some instances the subordinate grange pays the dues of the juvenile grange, holding that the paying of dues by a large family might become a burden to parents of moderate income. Others maintain that the paying of dues teaches the children business principles. No part of the fees or dues of a juvenile grange is paid to the national grange.

The Seven Founders.

It has been asked who the seven founders of the grange were. The seven founders of the grange or Order of Patrons of Husbandry were O. H. Kelly, William Saunders, W. M. Ireland, John Trimble, G. R. Thompson, Rev. A. B. Grosh, F. M. McDowell, and with them associated indirectly was Miss Caroline A. Hall, who was the first to suggest that women be given full and equal right to membership in the Order. The national grange was organized in Washington on Dec. 4, 1867, but a permanent organization as a delegated body was not perfected until the sixth annual session held in Georgetown, D. C., in 1873, with regular delegates from the nine state granges, representing 1,362 subordinate granges. Officers were elected, and the constitution and bylaws were adopted. The seventh annual session convened in St. Louis in February, 1874, with thirty-two states and two territories represented. Twelve thousand granges had been organized. At that session the declaration of purposes of the Order was prepared, adopted and published, and for over thirty years that immortal document has been before the world, eliciting admiration and challenging criticism.

New Grange Insurance Methods.

The Grange Mutual Fire Insurance company of Michigan is unique among insurance companies in some respects. It gives its members the initiative, referendum and recall in respect to its officers, who are elected annually by members of the company in their respective granges. Any changes to be made in the bylaws may be referred to the members for a referendum vote. In case of a loss the secretary or nearest director and the one sustaining the loss meet to make the adjustment, but in case of a disagreement the matter is referred to a committee of three appointed by the loser and the company. If this committee fails to come to an agreement it is left to the executive committee of the state grange for arbitration. After seven months' existence the company is carrying risks to the amount of $1,794,862.

A TRADE JOURNAL comes out with the statement that the price of sugar has been boosted to keep speculators from buying to control the market. Some joke to that. Who boosted sugar to $7.55 today?

VOTE county ballot first! The primary ballot will be of such a length and so many candidates to select from, that a great deal of time will be required to vote, intelligently. The county and local tickets are of much more importance to all parties than the state and national, therefore the voter should give the most time to county and local candidates and get thru with those before he gets weary of well doing.

EVERY VOTER should avail himself of the right at the primary election. One of the provisions of the primary election law states that when one of the candidates receives the majority of all votes cast for that office, his is the only name that will appear on the ballot at the fall election. Therefore one vote at the primary may be the one that elects or defeats your candidate. If you neglect to vote for your candidate on August 25th, you may not have the opportunity in November. Therefore, vote.

A GREAT deal of anxiety is felt in local fruit circles because of some of the packers are declaring that the war may force down the price of fruits. The idea is absurd. As a matter of fact the disturbance in Europe should naturally raise the price of those articles which the warring nations must have from here. To be sure just at present Germany cannot get her quota of prunes and apricots but in the readjustment of conditions, Europe in general will need everything in the food line that United States can spare. With that continent at war, the crops will be partly lost on account of lack of harvest hands.

OUR PRESIDENT

WOODROW WILSON stands today as the only man on earth exercising power outside of his own country. In more than a figurative sense he is the temporary ruler of the world. All hope of the restoration of peace, sooner or later, must rest with him.

Meanwhile, the preservation of neutrality by America, the conciliation of Mexico, the succor of all the nations of the earth devolves upon this country. This prestige must be maintained and this power exercised by the Chief Magistrate.

We believe that Woodrow Wilson is equal to the emergency, but his burdens are heavy and his personal and public trials grievous to be borne. He needs help. He needs the help which every loyal heart in America can render him to a greater or lesser degree.

Call the expression of this help prayers, or good wishes, or sympathy, or what you will, it is a vital force.

No true American in youth or age, ought to withhold this aid to the President.—Ex.

THE anti-boss conference committee held the opening meeting of its campaign in Campbell Monday evening. A report given in the Mercury by "A Staff Reporter" states that the meeting was well attended. If 35 to 50 is considered a well attended meeting, Mr. Reporter should come out when something of real interest to the Campbell people holds the stage. We call a "well attended meeting" an attendance of 250 to 500 enthusiasts. As a matter of fact by actual count at two different times, there were 36 and 52 respectively including candidates. Three of the four on committee of arrangements were not present. The conference candidate, for sheriff, Hugh DeLacy, is given quite a puff by this "Staff Reporter" as to his reception at the meeting when the audience was made up mostly of his opponents and their friends. These opponents were called upon to speak but thru courtesy had previously left the hall. Arthur Langford is still the most popular candidate for sheriff in and about Campbell. As has been said on the streets, if the report of the Campbell meeting may be taken as a sample, one may easily measure up the other meetings by reports. Now comes the Bulletin with the report of a packed house at the Campbell meeting. Will the next story be more exaggerated? The attendance was not 5000 but 50.

Local and Personal

Miss Hope Lent has returned from Capitola where she enjoyed a pleasant vacation.

"Chimes of Normandy" choral books may be had at Smith's Stationery store at half price. 50 cts. the copy.

Owner of coat left in automobile by Campbell boy may have same by paying for this advertisement at the PRESS office.

Mrs. Geo. W. Page and children returned today from a three week's outing at the coast, Mr. Page going after them with the auto.

The Campbell Union High School will open for the year 1914-15 on September 7th. All students are urged to be present at the beginning.

Herb. Wade and Howard Trussel are working out for chief chuffers on the new Farmer's Union motor truck. My word, but they are keeping up the polish on it these first few days.

Mr. and Mrs. Chas. Townsend and daughter, Gladys, left Tuesday for a two month's visit with Mr. and Mrs. L. E. Shafer at Mercer, Pa., and other relatives at Sandwich, Ill. Mr. Townsend is the oldest rural mail carrier in point of service, in the United States and this is his first long vacation in years. Claud is taking care of the route delivery during his father's vacation.

The report was made the first of the week that the Peninsular Company would probably surrender its interurban line franchise and discontinue the service between Los Gatos and San Jose on the Campbell and Saratoga lines. It was stated that the line was a losing investment on account of the increased auto travel. It is true that the income on all lines has decreased very materially owing to the increased number of autos but it is doubtful whether the company will surrender so valuable a franchise with so strong a competitor in the field as the Key Route System which is looking for just such opportunities. Cars will run for a time at least as scheduled.

Life at the Dryer!

A jest and laughter—a snatch of song;
A murmer of voices grave and gay,
And rising shrill above the din,
A call for fruit, a cry of "Tray."

Happy faces bending low
O'er piles of golden fruit
A flash of knives—a tramp of feet
And voices never mute.

We are a happy care-free crowd
In this place where the fruit is dried
Cheerfully toiling from sun to sun,
For we all like Mr. Hyde.

MRS. G. W. BALDWIN.

Highland Linen correspondence cards are tasty. Smith has them.

Notice

Miss Mary Woodbury, who has specialized in Domestic Science will speak on that subject to the members of the Home and School Club, and all others interested, Saturday, Aug. 15, at 2.30 p. m., at the home of Mrs. H. C. Smith, 369 Campbell Ave. As many as possible are urged to be present.

Mrs. Ryan and son, Harry left today for San Francisco for a ten day's stay where she will occupy an aunt's home during the latter's absence.

During the fore part of the week moving pictures were taken of operations at the Hyde Packing Plant, which will show the different processes in the preparation and drying of fruits, to be used in connection with the Santa Clara Co. exhibit at the Panama Pacific Expo.

Mutually Helpful.

Husband—Smikeson's wife is away and I'm going over there this evening to cheer him up. Wife—Why don't you bring him here? Husband—Well—er—I'm not feeling very well and need a little cheering up myself.

Tired of Them.

Deafness Cannot Be Cured

by local applications, as they cannot reach the diseased portion of the ear. There is only one way to cure deafness, and that is by constitutional remedies. Deafness is caused by an inflamed condition of the mucous lining of the Eustachian Tube. When this tube is inflamed you have a rumbling sound or imperfect hearing, and when it is entirely. Deafness is the result, and unless the inflammation can be taken out and this tube restored to its normal condition, hearing will be destroyed forever; nine cases out of ten are caused by Catarrh, which is nothing but an inflamed condition of the mucous surfaces.

We will give One Hundred Dollars for any case of Deafness (caused by catarrh) that cannot be cured by Hall's Catarrh Cure. Send for circulars, free.

A COUNTY OFFICIAL WITH A State-wide Reputation

County Surveyor J. G. McMillan, candidate for re-election at the August primaries, has a well established, state-wide reputation as an engineer, and not one merely confined to Santa Clara county. The following is from the July number of the Pacific Motor and American Motor News. After reviewing his professional record, it reads:

"Mr. McMillan is a member of the American Society of Civil Engineers. A vote for a man whose wide experience and enviable record means that California will reap the fruits of his long experience in road building and especially in the county which boasts of high-class construction in the type of modern roads and bridges."
